Entered at the Postoffice at Barre as Second Class Matter.

The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending Saturday was copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

4,252

Barre may be pardoned for crowing over its poultry exhibit.

There were no crossed or "busy" lines at the banquet of the Independent telephone companies at Bradford Tuesday night.

The Russian Terrorists have undoubtedly been practicing marksmanship; they haven't missed an official target for a week, and several newly made graves attest their skill with the gun.

In spite of a deficit of $128 last summer, the Valley Fair of Brattleboro will probably not cry out for nourishment from the state treasury. The deficit does not seem so large when the size of the receipts and expenditures is considered, there being total receipts of $12,583.35.

In addition to the generally poor appearance of the public statute supplement which the newspapers of the state were asked to distribute, to which we have already made reference, there seems to be one further fault with this job.

And now Uncle Sam is going to tackle the Standard Oil System, "the most corrupt organization that has ever flourished in the history of this country."

No secret rebates in our store. One price to all. A little boy or a big steel magnate get the same courteous treatment here and money back if goods are not satisfactory.

We Clean, Press and Repair Clothing. Fur Coats to Rent.

That is the unfairness in distribution to the papers. Some of the daily papers got their supplements considerably in advance of the others, a day or so at least, and by sending them out at once

A HOTEL LACK IN VERMONT.

The outside world will be pained to learn that St. Albans, Vt., has never replaced the Welden house. The Messenger of that city is still urging that this be done. It points out that St. Albans now has ample hotel accommodations for meetings of state societies, political conventions, etc., but can never hope to get them until first-class hotel accommodations are provided. The lack of a Welden house is a serious impeachment of the public spirit of St. Albans. —Springfield Republican.

Let the energetic contemporary in the railroad city dangle the above impeachment before its citizens in the efforts to get better hotel accommodations. It ought to fire them with ambition to retrieve their laurels. We, too, grieve with the Springfield editor over the fact that the new Welden has never arisen from the ashes of the old Welden. None the less do we grieve over the lamentable lack in the same line in other of the large places of Vermont. Here, for instance, is the city of Burlington, the big sister of the state's municipalities. This week it had two conventions which called together five or six hundred visitors from all parts of the state. Supposedly the best equipped for contingencies of this sort, Burlington was down and out on the proposition of caring for these delegates together with the smaller army of visitors whose course led them toward the Champlain at that particular time. Guests were informed that they could not have rooms to themselves, but that they might find shelter with perhaps four or six people within the four walls of the same room. It was generally a case of take what was offered, or take nothing. With January weather prevailing, the guests invariably chose what was offered rather than a bunk in the park. It is common gossip in Burlington that a New York man with the name of Hatch once swore by all that was in him that Burlington should have a new hotel, and it is said that each morning Burlingtonians draw up the shutters and peer out eagerly to see the new hostelry rearing itself ten stories or more. But the hotel is a paper hotel as yet. Nevertheless, Burlington, with all its large conventions and with its splendid scenic and railway advantages, needs a new hotel. St. Albans needs one. Barre needs one. In fact, one might name a long list of cities and towns which should not rest content until they are capable of extending at least a hospital welcome to their visitors.

Saturday night, January 12, the newly elected officers will be installed by H. W. Sargent of Brattleboro, assisted by his wife. After the installation an oyster supper will be served. Fire broke out from the chimney in the sitting room of the Judson Fitts' farm house yesterday morning at about eight o'clock. The fire was checked before it could gain much headway, but considerable damage was done to the room by smoke and by chopping the walls.
